

recent EIDL graduates

CLASS 106

Cesar Chavez Charter High School for Public Policy,
Washington, DC

Felipe Díaz, Wascar De Los Santos, Tasha Burgess, David
Flores, India Ford, Javier Arias

The steering committee, which is composed of five students, has come together to form the First Cesar Chavez Leadership Retreat in the history of the Cesar Chavez High School. During this Retreat, we will meet with 10 other students from the Chavez school, 15 including the steering committee, so we can further develop our school constitution and set up the school's government body. We will also spread awareness to these students about community issues as well as proposing possible solutions to these problems. With this Retreat, not only will we implement our school constitution, but we will also develop the students' leadership skills and show them that they have the power to influence their society.

Participants will develop a school constitution and submit it to the school at the beginning of the fall semester of 2001. We hope this constitution will be approved by the Board Of Education and become the school's official constitution.

"The EIDL program is very helpful to students like us, who like to get involved more in the community"

"During the EIDL program, we learned teamwork, cooperation and leadership to accomplish our objectives"

"We hope that future participants enjoy, learn as much as we did about how the EIDL program changed our views and lives"

Migrant Students from California with local students at Cesar Chavez Charter High School for Public Policy.